BAD OPERATION AVOIDED

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Sowers' Own Statement.

Hodgdon, Maine.—"I feel it a duty to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The work done by the children of the embroidery class will be shown in the show windows. This class is made up of children ranging in age from six to fourteen years. The children go to the Art Shop twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, during the summer vacation season, and receive free instruction in embroidery. There are perhaps fifty children in the class and some of them are developing decided talent. A few more children could be accommodated in the class and as the lessons are free it is an excellent opportunity for young girls to learn a very useful art. The public will find the display in the show windows at the Art Shop tomorrow very interesting.

ANOTHER TIME PIECE

By Ada Pasteur.

Scene from "THE HAND OF HORROR"

This is an age of horror. There is something in all of us that yearns for something morbid; something exciting; something horrifying—something which makes our breath come quicker and creates sort of a sensational feeling between the third and fourth ribs. We declare our antipathy for the morbidly "free" and yet we have an insane desire to gaze upon something real morbidly. One moment we find ourselves disliking unpleasant scenes and the next we find ourselves craving for an overdose of all that is creepy. Such is the inconsistency of humanity. It is incurable. And just because it is incurable, and impossible for us to overcome this singular trait, Mr. W. H. Durham has written a two-act drama which bids fair to create a violent heart action on the part of those who witness his thriller with the horrifying title, "The Hand of Horror." It is another one of those time pieces—and, I might add, of the Ingersoll variety. For it clicks with thrills from the moment of announcement until the finish. Every minute is crowded with more excitement than it would take a perfectly respectable clock to crowd into sixty minutes.

It is not often that the Edison Company presents a thriller, but when it does it makes up for all the time it has lost. In this particular piece time counts for everything, and the plot is laid around the face of a clock, which the author saw fit to place in a steeple four hundred feet above the earth. Then, so as not to deny the audience one thrill, which they were rightfully entitled to, he puts the hero on one of the hands of the clock and has the naughty villain lock the door in the steeple so that the man, who is on time, might be delayed from returning to earth until his wallet has been stolen.
